Description

Located on the west side of South Main Street, this building is a two story, five bay frame structure with a raised basement and a turn of the century period storefront. The structure is sheathed with German siding and windows and doors are trimmed with peaked architraves. Foundations, almost a story high at the west end are of coursed limestone. Windows have two over two pane sash and there are two-light transoms above the doors. Entrances are located in the central bays and a storefront occupies the northeast corner of the front. A porch supported by round doric columns extends along the entire front. The roof is covered with standing seam sheet metal and chimneys are located inside the end walls.

Although a building is shown on this site on the 1877 Atlas map, this structure appears more typical of the 1880s or '90s. It is an excellent and intact example of the late 19th century commercial and residential building. This was once occupied by J.A. Miller's Store. It is now a Masonic lodge.
